

A free press is one of the most important structures in our democratic society. That means the more competition, the more opportunities to hear all sides of an issue the more democratic. Consolidation means less democracy.